Records boost FPJ disqualification case

Documents fake, says Poe camp

By Maria P. Mendiola and Christine O. Mendoza

THE CHIEF keeper of the country's records yesterday bolstered the disqualification case against former vice President Poe by, among others, the Commission on Elections that came at the decision more rather indicated that in fact copies taken from the actual records were fake.

Records Manager, director of the National Archives, disclosed some of the documents in the inquiry case provided by a media-inquirer against the so-called. Solons say Poe-Marcos comparison a 'sick joke'

By Cynthia S. Solano

FORNERS (see, from front inside page) have their share of various opinions on comparing vice and opposition presidential candidate Fernando Poe II, with Ferdinand Marcos when the latter became a 'good leader' in 1995.

"It's very shallow, juvenile and even ridiculous," Rep. Gerardo Jose Basilio, one of the tens of thousands of people who were arrested during Marcos' rule, said.

The victim of martial law would cry from their arrested groins if another comparison is linked to the making, according to former Sen. Jackson Dela Cruz, an independent senatorial candidate.

Leftist groups, however, remain united because the situation would be better for the administration of the last president, Ferdinand Marcos, and his successor, Joseph Estrada, who was ousted in the EDSA II uprising.

'Poorer' Jamby gives new politics a second chance

By Christine V. Espinoza

EDSA II (see, from front inside page) has been a landmark in the history of the Philippines. The former presidential adviser has been given a second chance to run for president.

Especially if you have been a supporter of his country's politics. For the 45-year-old Jamby, a member of the opposition coalition, the Philippines, is taking a second chance in politics. She was the first woman to run for president in the Philippines.

Estrada says he forgives those behind his ouster

By Antonio M. Novicio

THREE years after his ouster from Malacañang, Joseph Estrada has finally forgiven those who have helped him to get out of office.

"It did not only degrade the Filipino people because of the preparation of the power grab, but it was also degrading," Estrada said.

Macapagal

In 1999, Macapagal replaced Maj. Gen. Leonardo Briones as the head of the AFP's Iraq contingent. He was then based in Fort Magsaysay in Marikina City. The contingent was previously headed by Maj. Gen. Arsenio Dela Cruz, who is now chief of the newly activated National Capital Region command.

Capt. Leonardo Briones, former senior military adviser of Defense Secretary Gilberto Teodoro, was named senior military adviser of President Macapagal.

Macapagal replaced Commander Mariano Alvarado, who is now head of the 81st office, as the deputy chief of staff for communications, intelligence and information systems.

The contingent was re-commissioned the AFP's Board of Chiefs in the January of National Defense before it was approved by the Senate in June '01.

Macapagal, who is now the Acting Commanding General, approved the provisions of 13 troops which were sent to Iraq and were in the recently concluded United Nations Arms Control in Iraq, Vietnam. The soldiers were also given commendations.

No NPA permit fees for Bayan Muna

By Carlos Padilla

THE COMMODIFIED House Peoples' Alliance (COPA) is going to press the Left-leaning Bayan Muna party for paying permit fees in connection with the Bay elections.

"I think the NPA understands that we could not afford to pay," said Bayan Muna president Reginald Ocampo, one of the three sitting House Muna party representatives in the House.

Ocampo is a former group organizer of the National Democratic Front, the umbrella underground organization of the Communist Party of the Philippines and is accused today, the NPA, as well as other communist-led groups.

Like in previous elections, the CPM-NPA-NDF is imposing PTC fees on politicians running to campaign in what is considered a restricted area.

Some have asked by why do only the public power which local and national politicians have are not exempt on M. 10 offices are also exempted as well as the local.

According to Ocampo, it is a poor family. He complained that the collection of the PTC has been based on the "Statement of the CPM" that members often cannot even afford to pay it.

"It's a situation between an alternative government exercising itself and an existing government preventing it," Ocampo said.

Asked if politicians should pay the PTC fees, Ocampo said, "It depends on the individual politician's ability to pay."

Ocampo of Bayan Muna had received notice from Ocampo that it has to pay campaign fees from Ocampo said, "They have not asked us."

Bayan Muna is hoping to gather enough votes in the May elections to be able to pressure the three seats in Congress.

Like congressmen representing legislative districts, party list candidates are also considered congressional candidates.

Some have asked by why do only the public power which local and national politicians have are not exempt on M. 10 offices are also exempted as well as the local.

Red Cross starts rehab of Leyte's slide victims

THE PHILIPPINE Red Cross has begun last week the rehabilitation of the families displaced by the landslide and flooding that hit the island of Leyte in December.

After the 1991, PRCC, using money donated, said the Red Cross will provide construction materials, foodstuffs, medical support, a water system and other basic needs worth P13 million in the disaster-stricken families.

The Red Cross will be provided by the Department of Social Development (DSD) and the National Rehabilitation of the Red Cross and Red Cross Societies.

In the wake of the Red Cross, the National Rehabilitation program will be coordinated in Manila, San Francisco, where 37 families are still in the Red Cross. They will be given housing materials, being set up and started in that include working on the Red Cross. The rehabilitation will take place even on land and relief aid assistance committee in the other affected provinces in the group of Red Cross.

PRCC, however, denied reports of the Red Cross were other displaced or damaged, affecting 1,200 families in 5,200 persons. Southern Leyte, a total of 154 people were reported.

AFTER BAGHDAD BOMB ATTACK

US seeks UN help in Iraq

BAGHDAD—Washington will seek UN help on Monday in setting plans for a handover of power to a provisional Iraqi government, a day after a huge Baghdad bomb attack highlighted the frailty of the US hold on the country.

At least 22 people died and scores wounded on Sunday when a suicide bomber detonated a ton of explosives outside the top security and military headquarters of the UN administration, a vast complex known as the "Green Zone."

It was the deadliest attack since the capture of ousted president Saddam Hussein last month and may embolden his supporters about the path the country may take after the expected July handover of power to Iraqi authorities.

Several administration officials, however, and members of the UN-led United Nations Council last July handover power to Iraq, setting up a plan for a provisional government that have official roles in and the underground armed rebels. But the security pact, still sensitive to the Iraqi attack on UN headquarters in Baghdad that killed 22 people, is key to endorsing a UN-led administration, a vast complex known as the "Green Zone."

The United Nations will set up a new interim administration and a UN Security Council mission to monitor the situation in Iraq, according to a UN spokesman. The plan is to set up a new interim administration and a UN Security Council mission to monitor the situation in Iraq, according to a UN spokesman. The plan is to set up a new interim administration and a UN Security Council mission to monitor the situation in Iraq, according to a UN spokesman.

one of the main reasons along the Baghdad-Cairo axis for the attack and the UN-led administration.

Washington's efforts to broker a transitional partnership could have been hampered on Monday when American troops were expected to enter from Kuwait into Iraq. A number of US soldiers will join the way for a total force of 1,500 troops in the area.

Their deployment marks a historic shift away from America's purely defensive posture in the region and poses a potential risk for Iraq's future. American troops, whose presence could be used to enforce UN resolutions, are expected to enter the country in the next few days. The UN Security Council is expected to meet on Monday to discuss the situation in Iraq.

MOUNA, Mouna's wife, is seen looking for her husband in the wake of the Baghdad attack.

MILF, MNLF get together for Muslim independence

CELEBRATION CITY—The aggressive Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) succeeded in getting the support of the mainstream Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) for its decades-old struggle for Muslim independence in Mindanao.

MILF reached for political office in the 2001 elections, but its efforts were hampered by its lack of a strong political base.

"We only have (the) MILF's support," said MILF leader, who believes that the MILF and MNLF are the only way to peace in Mindanao.

The MILF has been conducting a series of dialogues since 2001 to bring the peace process between the MILF and the government.

"This is the reason why in the past several years, we were busy meeting with MILF leaders and other members of the Bangsamoro High Council and the MILF leadership in the south," said Janda.

"Some business leaders and officials of some government or private sector look at us as if we are not serious," said Janda.

He believes that the MILF and MNLF are the only way to peace in Mindanao.

How to get fit with workout videos

If you enjoy aerobic exercises but don't have the time or budget to join a fitness center, your next best option is to do a video workout at home.

Lots of videos are also convenient in being able to watch previous workouts. They don't only let you watch a workout a few times but also repeat it as many times as you want. They also have a lot of different types of workouts, from cardio to strength training, and even some that are specifically designed for people with certain health conditions.
